.SPECIAL EDITION

The successful collaboration between md interior design architecture and db deutsche bauzeitung enters its fourth round – once again under the title „Material matters“.

This time, however, the focus lies on contrast rather than distinctive material use.

The editors compare projects such as two concrete houses or two metal façades that differ entirely in design despite sharing the same primary material. In addition to these large-scale material juxtapositions, attention is also given to the finer details – such as switches that offer not only functional, but also tactile and aesthetic qualities. Insights into current materials research – from hemp as a construction material to AI-assisted recycling of construction material – provide a deeper context.

.MATERIAL

Material defines more than just the appearance of a building – it shapes its tactile qualities, acoustics and overall atmosphere. Our product feature showcases ground-breaking building materials: from recyclable flooring systems and vibrant colours to innovative surface finishes.

.PRODUCTS

Switches are not only functional elements – they also offer tactile and aesthetic qualities. Whether through textured surfaces, innovative material combinations or seamless integration, they demonstrate how material impact can make a real difference, even at the smallest scale.
